Miniature Cyclone Hits Farm House on Oshkosh-Van Dyne Road Friday Night

3 SONS ESCAPE UNINJURED

Barns, Crops and Livestock On Farms North of Fond du Lac Suffer in Storm

By Associated Press
Oshkosh, Wis. — Mr. and Mrs. Gust Strum of Vandine, nine miles south of this city, are at St. Agnes hospital at Fond du Lac suffering from severe injuries sustained at 3 o'clock Saturday morning when their home was tipped over by the windstorm. Mr. Strum sustained three fractured ribs and severe cuts on his legs. Mrs. Strum was cut on the head and legs. Their three sons, aged 12, 17 and 11 years were in the building, but escaped without injury.

Mr. and Mrs. Strum live on the farm of Charles Schaefer on the Oshkosh-Vandine road. They are employed as beet workers and lived in a small house near the Schaefer home. Mr. Strum said he had been asked by his wife to get up and close a door which had been blown open and had just returned to his bed when a sudden blast of wind lifted the building and turned it completely over, leaving it right side up about twenty feet from its original location.

Mr. Strum was crowded against the wall with the kitchen stove holding him there and Mrs. Strum lay in one corner with the sewing machine on top of her. Unable to be of assistance to his wife, Mr. Strum crawled on his hands and knees and his night clothes to the Schaefer home and medical assistance was summoned.

The Vandine couple are the only persons known to have been injured by the storm, but it did a vast amount of property damage.

CROPS AND BARN'S DESTROYED

The barns of Frank Dellger and Frank Streblow on farms on the Scott street road about a mile west of Fond du Lac were destroyed. The two barns near the town of Eden are said to have been blown down. Some of the orchards west of the city were damaged and growing crops are flat. Many trees in the city of Fond du Lac were damaged, large limbs being broken off. The same general condition obtains at North Fond du Lac.

At Oshkosh the damage was chiefly to trees. On the farm of Fred Sutter in the town of Winchester, seven cows were killed by lightning. Several barns in this vicinity were damaged. Alfalfa and clover crops, ready to be cut, were laid to the ground, causing loss to farmers.

BIG LEAGUE PENSIONS OLD TIME BALL PLAYER

San Francisco — C. A. McVey halted in his rounds early Friday as a watchman for a San Francisco lumber company to answer the telephone. "This you call?" queried the voice of a sporting editor, friend of the veteran baseball player. "The National league voted you a monthly pension today Cal," the voice continued. "What do you think of that?"

It was welcome news to the old timer. Rheumatism and other ills of advanced age have meant weeks in the hospital of recent years. Cal is 72 years old.

"Cal McVey" was a grand name back in the 70's and 80's when he was linked with those of A. G. Spaulding, Jim White and Ross Barnes.

Watson Attack on Italian Ambassador Likely to Curb Harvey's Speeches

BACK TO PRE-WAR CUSTOMS

Warning to Diplomats to Keep Out of Domestic Affairs of Foreign Countries

By DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright, 1922, by the Post Pub. Co.
Washington — It's an ill wind that blows no good—and already enough has happened to indicate that one of the unexpected effects of the speech of Senator James Watson, Republican of Indiana criticizing European diplomats for speech-making on the tariff question will be to muzzle American diplomats abroad.

For a long time the present administration has been embarrassed by the speech making proclivities of some of the American ambassadors. The notable George Harvey at London has with difficulty suppressed his desires for expression. Significant therefore is the constant emphasis by high officials of the American government that in asking the foreign diplomats to refrain from discussing the tariff and other domestic questions, the United States is merely asking that other governments observe the same rules and instructions as are in effect on this subject in the American code for ambassadors and ministers.

Careful examination of the printed code reveals the fact that all speeches by American diplomatic officers are absolutely forbidden except on extraordinary festive occasions, and the inference is that the American diplomats will even then confine their remarks on the comments on the activities of nature and the wonderful opportunities nations have nowadays to further the brotherhood of man.

It's difficult to lecture an ambassador like George Harvey whose political influence is multiplex and whose ability to express himself is attested by a long career as a journalist and editor—a master of after-dinner oratory. But it is important to note that even Senator Watson used in his speech an illustration based on the hypothesis that Colonel Harvey might make sundry remarks on British internal questions. The truth is American diplomats, in the past have offended almost as much as European diplomats here and what we are witnessing in fact is a return to pre-war normal in diplomatic etiquette. The war period broke down all rules. Ambassadors discussed publicity questions internal and external and without submitting copies of their remarks to the department of state for approval. Ambassadors from foreign lands who have followed in the wake of the war have felt the same freedom to express themselves on post-war questions.

Senator Watson's speech and Secretary Hughes conversations with foreign diplomats following immediately after a private conference between the Secretary of State and Mr. Watson may bring about a return to pre-war custom. In the present dispute emphasis is laid on the tariff as an internal question, purely domestic in the sense that a bill now pending before an American legislative body. Even if it has international phases officials feel that its status is for the moment domestic and speeches made by foreign diplomats cannot but be construed as an effort to influence American public opinion.

WOMAN GUILTY OF KILLING HUSBAND

By Associated Press
Green Lake, Wis. — Mrs. Lottie Gardner was found guilty of murder in the first degree Friday by a jury in connection with the death by poison of her husband, Fred, on January 17 last.

Mrs. Gardner claimed her husband committed suicide. At first she denied that any poison was in the home at the time, but after witnesses had testified that she had obtained poison at a drug store she admitted the purchase but said one package had disappeared shortly before her husband died.

The state held as a motive for murder, the fact that her name had been linked with that of a neighbor and that she had been considering obtaining a divorce that she might wed again.

Mrs. Gardner, who is 37 years of age, is the mother of three girls. It is expected that sentence of life imprisonment will be imposed on Saturday.

CHARGE PIECE WORK FORCED BY N. Y. C. LINE

New York Central Lines Are Accused of Violating Transportation Act

By Associated Press
Chicago — Hearings on charges that men employed in shops of the New York Central lines had been forced into accepting piece work in violation of the provisions of the transportation act were resumed Saturday by the United States railroad board.

A hearing on the piece work complaint was one of the points demanded by B. M. Jewell, head of the railroad department of American Federation of labor and the piece work controversy is one of the subjects on the strike ballots which have gone out to the railway workers whose wages were slashed by the board.

Meanwhile the strike vote continued. Samuel M. Felton, president of the Chicago Great Western railroad and chairman of the western committee on public relations of the Association of Railway executives, who Friday asserted that a rail strike was unjustified, declaring that disproportionate reduction in freight rates and wages of railroad employees, coupled with a mass of burdensome legislation, are fast driving the country towards a condition in which its production and industry will be restricted or strangled by inadequate railway systems.

Sinn Feiners Attack Attachment of Special Constabulary Quartered in House

By Associated Press
Belfast — Sinn Feiners early Saturday attacked a house in which a detachment of special constabulary was quartered. Their preparatory measure of extinguishing the street lamps aroused the suspicions of the guards who awakened the sleeping constables.

A bomb was hurled through a skylight but injured no one. This was followed by rapid revolver fire which was likewise devoid of effect. A number of attacks were discovered on the roofs of adjoining buildings. They were fired upon but escaped.

There were many incendiary fires in the city Saturday. A block of buildings in Alfred street occupied by linen firms was badly damaged. A garage was set afire and five automobiles were damaged.

Mars, according to Dr. Slipher, director of the observatory, shows existence of certain essentials for life. "Water, atmosphere and temperature above the freezing point, I believe, have been amply shown to exist on Mars," he said. "On June 18 Mars will be 32,380,000 miles from the earth. In 1924 Mars will approach closer however, by 7,700,000 miles.

Waterworks Men Organize Society At Conclave Here

New Organization is Formed to Advance Knowledge of Waterworks Problems — Will Hold Conventions Once Each Year.

"The Wisconsin Section of the American Waterworks association" was formally organized Friday afternoon in the city hall, where delegates from Wisconsin city waterworks departments to the convention of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities adopted a constitution and elected the permanent officers of the association.

The members of the executive committee are D. W. Mead, consulting engineer of Madison, chairman; Leon A. Smith, plant superintendent of Madison, vice chairman; C. M. Baker, superintendent at Janesville, and H. R. Bohman, superintendent at Milwaukee, directors. The temporary membership committee consisting of A. J. Hall, J. G. Smyser, Chicago and Fred R. Morris, secretary of the Appleton water commission was made a permanent committee for the ensuing year.

The object of the newly formed organization was defined as "the advancement of knowledge of the design, construction, operation and management of waterworks and the encouragement of waterworks men to engage in the study of a friendly exchange of information and experience." Membership is to consist of the members of the American Waterworks association. Conventions will be held annually, the sense of the meeting being that they take place in conjunction with those of the League of Municipalities. Summer conventions, however, were not considered convenient for either waterworks or municipal officials and the league may be memorialized to hold its conventions either in early spring or in fall.

Friday's program, in addition to organization, was devoted to discussion of several addresses. Plant efficiency was represented by John White, state power plant engineer, Madison, who told how economy in operation and upkeep of the plant would make for greater efficiency. W. O. Hotchkiss, state geologist, Madison, spoke on the sinking of wells and the consequent depths of wells that would be conducive to the best supply. W. G. Kirchoffer, consulting engineer of Madison, also spoke on development of wells and deep well pumping.

C. M. Baker, state sanitary engineer, presented the subject of the sanitary conditions of water supply, water conservation, and the control of contamination by sewage, and the control of epidemics such as typhoid fever. A collection of samples of water was exhibited by M. Starr Nichols, chemist of the state board of health, who also gave an interpretation of chemical analyses of water.

The answer asserts that Miss Trenton, who was among 17 young women expelled during the period of several weeks for "publicly and privately indulging in the use of cigarettes" and "that she disregarded all established social customs, uses and conventions established by society with reference to the conduct of public school teachers."

Miss Trenton, in her suit declared her expulsion had brought about her estrangement from her father, defamed her character and made it practically impossible for her to engage in the profession of teaching.

BANKERS ARE NOT IN FAVOR OF LOAN TO GERMANY NOW

International Bankers Recommend Small Loan to Prevent Financial Collapse

By Associated Press
Paris — An important conclusion arrived at by the International Committee of bankers as set forth Saturday in their final report to the allied reparations commission, is that although a large international loan to Germany cannot be recommended at the present time, the subject can be taken up later and that meanwhile a relatively small loan, to prevent a financial collapse in Germany, might be arranged if necessities should require it.

The document explains that the collective judgment of the bankers is "that for various reasons within the limits of the terms under which the subject was referred to them, and understood in their more restrictive sense, they could not offer any prospect of an external loan at this time."

42 Million Addition To House Bill

Tariff Measure To Be Laid Aside Temporarily To Take Up Appropriation

NAVY BASES NOT ALLOWED

Committee Agrees With House On 86,000 Enlisted Men and 19,500 Marines

By Associated Press
Washington — Appropriations of $294,235,000 are made in the annual naval appropriation bill as reported out Saturday by the senate appropriations committee. This represents a net increase of $42,965,000 over the house bill but $131,251,000 less than requested by the navy department.

The bill is to be called up next Monday by agreement to lay aside the pending tariff bill temporarily under plans made by Senator Poindexter, Republican, Washington, who will have active charge of the naval budget.

EXPECT LITTLE OPPOSITION

Much less opposition than usual was anticipated in the senate because of the committee's action in agreeing with the house to an enlisted personnel of 86,000 men and 19,500 marines, but notice has been given of objection to several of the committee increases. Senator King, Democrat, Utah, is expected to move to reduce the marine corps personnel to 10,000 men and to terminate marine operations in Haiti and Santo Domingo.

Principal increases in navy appropriations noted in the committee report were: Navy building $10,000,000; new air craft $6,537,000; pay $26,016,000; engineering $2,685,000 and construction and repair of vessels $2,000,000.

REDUCES EXPENDITURES

As revised by the committee the bill entails a large reduction in naval expenditures, the appropriations for the present fiscal year being $425,486,000 or $119,000,000 more than the bill reported Saturday.

The bill carries no appropriations requested by the navy department for new Pacific Coast naval bases, the committee rejecting requests for a new torpedo destroyer base at San Pedro, Calif., the proposed fleet base at Alameda, Calif., and an aviation base at Sand Point, Wash.

The committee however authorized $687,500 increases for the Puget Sound and Pearl Harbor navy yards.

Regarding the naval aviation increases the committee said that "the absolute independence of the air service as a branch of the naval warfare" had been demonstrated. The total aviation appropriations were $14,703,000 and the report said that $15,000,000 had been appropriated for the army air service, a total for both of $29,703,000 as compared with aviation budgets of $66,494,000 by Great Britain, $44,600,000 by France and $18,723,000 by Japan.

In striking out the house provision to reduce the recent Annapolis naval cadet graduating class to 200 the committee said that it was now obsolete, all of the graduates having been commissioned.

LIONS FEEDING ON RAW MEAT TO TEAR UP ROTARY

Expect Stack of New Records at First Annual Lion-Rotary Outing

Lions intend to put up something more than an ear-splitting roar in order to win the contests at the joint Lions-Rotary picnic to be held at High Cliff park next Tuesday afternoon. All the university stars in the ranks are being pressed into service to match the Rotary talent.

It was not supposed to be known but it has been discovered that the "cubs" are being fed raw meat so they will be wild when the automobiles discharge them on top of the cliffs ready for their spring into the arena.

"We're strong on our feet and dry behind the ears," said R. H. Starkey, chairman of the Lion's arrangements. "Most of us can run the 100 yards in less than nine."

When Mark Catlin, University of Chicago star in the old days, gets into action, for instance, the scores are expected to mount rapidly for the shaggy headed animals.

Dr. C. E. Reinick, Eugene Smith and Walter Joyce are to run for the Lions in the 30 yard dash for men over 200 pounds. Six men go into the shot put race under the shuttle plan. They are John R. Riedl, Ben J. Roehm, Mark Catlin, Dr. J. J. Ellisworth, Harry Onks and Richard White.

Catlin, Norman Fischer and L. J. Lazar go into the 50-yard race. The Lions volleyball team will include Dr. Ellsworth as captain, W. J. Commenz, Riedl, Prof. E. E. Emmet, Roehm, C. E. Foreman and White.

Entrants for the hurdle race, wheelbarrow and 3-legged races, lead relay, indoor baseball game and tug-of-war have not been named because of the care with which the "athletes" are being chosen.

Mrs. M. Hau, Paul A. and Viola Hau, Mrs. A. Bielawski and Eleanor Bielawski, Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Henderson and son, Forest Park, Ill., and Mrs. M. Maurer and Marcella Maurer, Milwaukee are guests of Edward Maurer.

One of the last words spoken at the convention of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities which closed Friday was the advice of Mayor A. A. Bentley, president, on progress.

"Every city must stay young in order to keep up with rapidly changing conditions. Laws cannot hold good for all time, but must be changed to meet changing needs. The city that has the courage to take the initiative is the city that is bound to succeed."

"There has been much criticism of the movies, jazz, dress standards and flappers. But I have great faith in the younger generation. Benefited by our improving educational institutions, the younger people are passing us by."

"When I get to be 80 or 90 years old and go wobbling on a cane in my back yard, in my heart I will enjoy seeing my children take an airplane trip to the moon for a Sunday afternoon picnic."

Bees in Outagamie-co. are in fairly good condition, Mr. Chert said. Inspectors thus far have found four foul broods and a few minor diseases but the condition is not as critical as in some other counties.

NEED FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE FOR HOME BUILDING

Lawrence Student Wins Prize With Article Outlining Housing Situation Here

Presentation of Appleton's housing needs and the methods by which the shortage may be overcome are the topics of one of the prize-winning essays at Lawrence college this year. They are contained in a paper prepared by Edward W. Ziegler, a sophomore, who won the Champion prize for the best essay on some current topic.

Writing under the caption, "The Need of Greater Financial Assistance in the Building Trade in Appleton," Mr. Ziegler outlines his findings in an investigation here and urges measures which will induce more home building, particularly support of Appleton Building and Loan association.

Futility of many of the housing movements is explained and the situation which led to a housing shortage, mainly the curtailment of building during the war, outlined. Increases in rents, with specific examples of unreasonable increases are described.

These reasons are given for encouraging more homes by the writer: Reduction in rents, increase in home ownership by employees; making of better citizens; lessening of labor turnover.

Solution of this problem should be accomplished, says Mr. Ziegler, by educating people that have money to make safe investments in their own city by advocating passage of the proposed Calder federal building loan bank bill, and by passing a law in the state exempting from taxation for a term of ten years all home building begun and finished within the next two years.

"The investing of money in the Appleton Building and Loan association is an absolutely safe investment," Mr. Ziegler writes. "If our citizens, instead of buying oil and other blue sky stocks and even 8-cent notes of good but foreign companies, would invest their savings in local home mortgages, home building again would resume, the investor's money would be invested safely and the whole community would profit by a wholesome and much needed development."

The Calder bill is explained as a measure that provides federal building loan banks. These are authorized to issue bonds at 4 1/2 per cent secured by mortgages held by building and loan associations. The money from the bond sales goes to the loan associations which are members of the federal banks. Much more capital thus becomes available at once for home building. These securities and earnings are tax-exempt also.

DELEGATES SEE NEW PAVING PLAN

Wisconsin Vibrolithic Company Demonstrates Its Machines Before Visitors

Demonstrations of the vibrolithic method of laying concrete pavements were given delegates to the convention of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities here Friday by A. H. Gladden, chief engineer of the new Appleton paving firm, Wisconsin Vibrolithic Service company.

One of the machines was operated in the parking space opposite the Sherman house, showing how the vibration of the patented tamping machine is transmitted to a platform and then to the ground. The shaking of the earth could be felt for a wide radius around the machine.

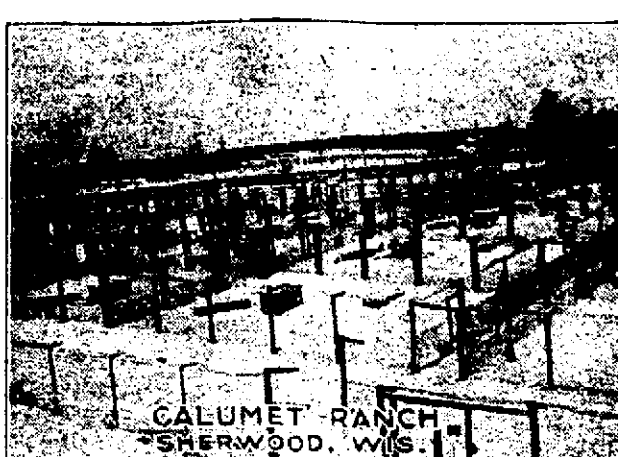

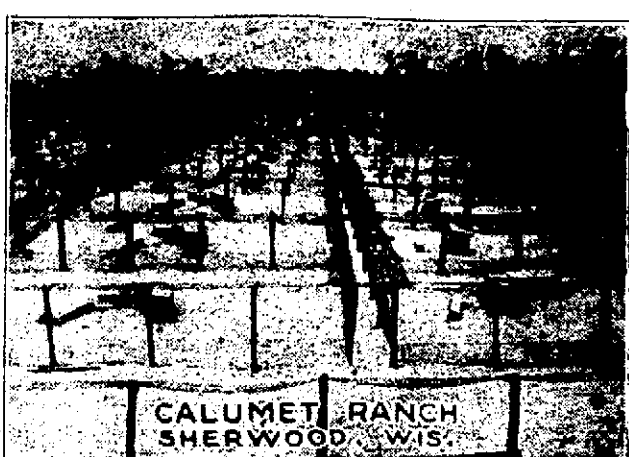

In this paving process the concrete is packed to a tensile strength several times that of hand-tamped mixture and it is possible to produce a stone-wearing surface instead of concrete by tamping crushed stone into the soft cement, the flat side of stones always coming to the surface. One of the machines was on exhibition in the Sherman house lobby and at the city hall.

Silver Mine In Calumet County

HERE ARE TWO VIEWS OF THE CALUMET FOX RANCH NEAR SHERWOOD, THE HOME OF EXTREMELY VALUABLE SILVER FOXES. MANY APPLETON PEOPLE HAVE VISITED THE RANCH.

There is a silver mine near Appleton, for every silver black fox on a fox farm just out of Sherwood represents a silver nugget. Indeed, each silver black fox raised here is worth its weight in gold, since it is the costliest in the world, as the market reports will show. And there were 180 foxes on the ranch a few days ago. There may be more by tomorrow.

This farm just recently contracted for a sale of $50,000 worth of these valuable animals and is now negotiating another $50,000 sale, according to an Appleton resident who is financially interested in the farm. The foxes sold at $2,000 a pair.

The home of these silver "black beauties" is the Calumet Silver Black Fox Ranch and is situated one and a half miles south of Sherwood. O. W. McCarthy, Sherwood, is the president of the company and H. J. Schomer, president of the Sherwood and Chilton banks, is the secretary. Considerable space was given the ranch in a recent issue of the Wisconsin Agriculturalist, one of the leading farm papers in America, in an article on "Fur Farming."

ing in Wisconsin," by E. B. Swingle. Several photographs accompanied the article, one showing a man holding a few of the fox "puppies" raised on the ranch.

The farm started out on a small scale two years ago with but a few foxes to mate. The first year 63 foxes were raised, it was said. This number was increased to 163 the second year. Twenty pair have bred 100 young this year. The average litter is about five little ones. Yet last year one pair had a litter of seven, all of which lived, and this year another pair had 10, which is considered a very rare case. Only seven of these lived, however.

No pair is valued at less than $1,500. The best breeders are retained. It is said, their value being placed at $5,000 or more. Peltis sell at from $400 to $1,500 each. That is a high price to pay for a small fur, but it has been found that people who will part with their money for expensive jewelry will do the same for these coveted articles. One pair of the Calumet ranch was taken to a Canadian exhibit last year and won first prize, it was said.

The silver black beauties—they are black foxes with white hair tips—which are raised on the Calumet ranch are kept in pens 40 by 50 feet in size, with one pair to a pen. They are confined by a double wire fence eight feet high, well protected against theft. Horse meat is the food generally served. But the bill of fare of the mother fox before delivery and during the nursing period consists of eggs, milk, rabbits and poultry.

The average life of a silver black fox is said to be 10 to 15 years. The female breeds from 10 to 12 times. The first mating age is at six months. Both male and female regard scrupulously the state of monogamy, and will fight viciously against any would-be "homebreaker." Both parents provide food for the little ones and Sir Reynard himself is a good daddy to the pups. When a mother fox died last year, the litter was brought up by the father and the rancher's milk bottle. A still more interesting case, which happened on another ranch, was that of a 50 cent house cat mothering a $25,000 litter of silver black foxes.

In America who hasn't heard of Irene Castle, he is a recluse living on some mountain or in the back waters of Florida cyprus swamps. Long noted for her charming grace and irresistible way of wearing clothes, this dainty danseuse has won her way to the hearts of countless thousands of theatre goers. In "French Heels" her personality is the dominating force. In her dancing she creates intriguing steps that will take the terpsichorean world by storm, and her introduction of new and charming modes will excite the admiration of any audience.

BROWN SWISS DAIRYMEN TO HOLD STATE OUTING

Breeders of Brown Swiss cattle in this county, most of whom live near Seymour, are planning to attend the meeting and picnic of the Wisconsin Brown Swiss Breeders Association at the Miller & Loeffler farm, Green Lake-co, Wednesday, June 14. The farm is located about five miles north of Markesan. No plans have been made to form an Outagamie-co. delegation, because breeders of this type of cattle are not numerous here.

REASON SHOULD BE GUIDE OF ALL CITY OFFICIALS

Judge E. V. Werner Defines Legal Term of "Reasonable" at Convention

Reasonableness should be the guide and rule of all municipal officials in all public acts, was the counsel of Judge Edgar Werner, speaking before the convention of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities on Friday. "Powers conferred on municipalities," he said, "are a delegated power conveying certain discretion on commissions and councils to regulate local conditions for local needs and general welfare; and the border line or limit of that power, when not expressly limited or denied, is defined by the word 'Reasonable.'"

"Reasonable," as applied to law is not what extremists on one side or the other would deem fit or fair. It is the calm sea level, so to speak, of common sense, that applies to the whole situation in view of the end to be attained.

"Law is the rule of reason applied to existing conditions. Obviously, when conditions change, there must be a corresponding change in the law, else it would cease to be a rule of reason and become a mere arbitrary static rule."

"Under our system of laws, officials of municipalities exercise delegated powers as an arm of government with local responsibilities and obligations for local needs, which power is more or less limited and governed by state law. These laws are purely guides for official efficiency. A close observance of them will result in official efficiency."

Judge Werner in his address which will be published in full in the magazine of the League of Municipalities, suggested several modifications of the present laws to give municipalities greater freedom. Condemnation proceedings to open streets tried before a jury, he deemed inadvisable. He maintained that jurymen called from the towns and villages in the country are not the best judges in these matters. Cities should have the same freedom in determining their own assessments as towns, railroads and public service companies. "In all your actions," the judge concluded, "don't ever be hasty; get your bearings first always; find out what legal authority you have and resort to your good sense and ask yourself the question, 'Is this thing reasonable?' You will so be in the best possible position to arrive at the real solutions."

THE OLD GUARD ON THE RUN

An event of great political importance during the week was the nomination by Iowa republicans of Smith W. Brookhart for United States senator. This is the third, and as yet the worst, blow administered to the Harding government in the last few weeks of senatorial primaries. Mr. Brookhart's nomination is regarded as more far reaching and menacing to the old guard than the overthrow of New in Indiana or the triumph of Gifford Pinchot in Pennsylvania.
There were six candidates in the field in Iowa. The last one to enter was an administration favorite and it is said he was injected into the contest to prevent a selection at the primary, the low requiring a thirty-five per cent vote to nominate, and thus throw the nomination into a convention where the organization bosses could control it. The plan was a dismal failure for Brookhart led the field with a heavy plurality and was easily nominated.
Brookhart is the most anti-administration candidate for the senate yet named. In some respects he is a radical, and is an uncompromising antagonists of the Old Guard. He made much of Newberryism and ran on an anti-railroad, pro-agriculture, pro-labor and pro-business platform. His chief issue was a demand for repeal or modification of the Esch-Cummins transportation act. While it appears that the charge of radicalism against the Iowan is exaggerated, the fact remains that he is in acute conflict with the administration on many of its policies. The election signified beyond doubt a growing dissatisfaction with the reactionary organization in control of the Republican party, and which presumably is dictating policies at Washington. When we consider what is being done in the matter of tariff revision, the bungling and dishonest handling of the soldiers' bonus, the suppression of the Daugherty case and the seating of Senator Newberry, it is not surprising there is popular revolt against the administration.
The organization will, with hardly the slightest doubt, receive the same treatment in Wisconsin as it has received in Pennsylvania, Indiana and Iowa. The annual convention of the Committee of Forty-four at Milwaukee merely illustrates the semi-bankrupt state of the machine organization throughout the country, so far as judgment and the selection of strong leaders are concerned. We have no doubt the senatorial primary will show the Republican party in Wisconsin is completely in control of the LaFollette machine and that Old Guard methods and men are hopelessly in the discard.
Nothing could more convincingly prove to President Harding that the tendency of the country is overwhelmingly progressive, and that the great majority he received two years ago was not to be considered in any sense a vote of confidence in the old guard or a desire to return to reactionary policies, than the recent senatorial primaries.
Down in Massachusetts, where the privileged interests are entrenched in government quite as strongly as they were in Pennsylvania, Senator Lodge has the fight of his life on his hands for re-nomination. He is being opposed by former Governor Samuel W. McCall. Nowhere in the United States can the forces of progress so devoutly hope for victory as in Massachusetts, where the defeat of Senator Lodge would be the greatest contribution to forward government in the last decade. The chief apostle of reaction and the most powerful leader in the stand-pat crowd, Senator Lodge is an indispensable prop to the organization. His defeat would necessitate a right-about-face policy by the administration, and the practically complete abandonment by the president of the old guard.

Queer, isn't it, how old ideas stick long after we have found them wrong? Thus, a great many people, even some poorly educated doctors, still speak of the skin pores being open or closed just as our grandfathers did before the nonentity of "pores" was demonstrated by microscopic study of the skin.
Hay fever, for instance, is caused by almost anything but hay. Now that's strange, isn't it, hey?
There is a kind of hay fever which visits the victim in the spring months and along up until nearly haying time, which is caused by the pollen of grass, various grasses, in fact, such as June grass, sometimes redtop, sometimes blue grass, sometimes sweet vernal grass in the middle west, and possibly in rare instances even by old timothy hay. But timothy is more honored in the breach than the observance so far as general pollenitis or hay fever is concerned. Probably less than 1 per cent of all spoken hay fever cases are due to timothy.
Summer hay fever, which begins some time in June, whether summer has arrived or not, and extends along to the latter part of September, is never caused by hay, the haying time ought to be just the time for it, hey? Summer hay fever is generally caused by pollens from the various varieties of dock, goosefoot and amaranths. Summer hay fever isn't such a tremendous success as the spring and autumn kinds. A summer hay fever victim is a mere piker, so far as the vehemence or virtuosity of his symptoms are concerned.
The fall type of hay fever begins as early as the last of August and languishes until the first frost. This is the genuine thing, in all except the hay. There is no hay about the fall fever. What the fall guy can't match in the way of symptoms is scarcely worth recording. He packs a wicked sneeze. The most common cause of fall fever is ragweed pollen. Ragweed is one of the decorative plants of our "unimproved" parcels of more or less real estate in cities and the waste places along the roadside and under the fences in the country. There are several varieties of ragweed working overtime on the hay fever job, a small or trial size variety, a medium size and a giant ragweed or hospital size in the west. But don't let these variations in size mislead you about the effect of the ragweeds in action: like babies, sometimes the smaller they are the fiercer they are, and exposure they can cause. Possibly the size of the pollen grains may have something to do with the severity of the hay fever; and that is, the larger pollens are less likely to set up trouble than are the very minute pollens. But here again we can draw no conclusions, because some of the huskiest weeds produce the meanest little pollen grains imaginable, and grains covered with little prickling spikes at that. The form of the pollen grains floating in the air is more important, for smooth globular pollens are less frequently responsible for hay fever than are irregular or spiny surfaced grains.
Any physician anywhere may treat hay fever victims with appropriate pollen extracts with fair success as far as relief of treatment is concerned, commenced six weeks before the usual date of the annual attack and in severe cases for relief of the attack.

As it is today, special interests write the tariff from schedules A to Z. They dominate both branches of congress, and particularly the senate, and the scandals already made public in connection with the pending tariff bill show that the old game of making the tariff a great grab bag for the enrichment of a few is still in vogue. For instance, an effort to fix a $20,000,000 bounty for the cement interests had to be abandoned when it was given wide publicity. It was a pure gift without the slightest justification. The schemes for the enrichment of cotton, wool, knitted wear, cutlery, linoleum, glue, jewelry and food interests are notorious and indefensible.
The whole subject of tariff making is at present involved in greed and deceit. It is an imposition upon the farmer and the consumer and contrives more than any other one thing to inspire public distrust of politicians and parties. Already tariff revision has become an economic issue. The country realizes what the politicians at Washington are bent upon doing, and if the revolt against their betrayal of the nation is sufficient to compel the administration to take the tariff out of politics and regulate it henceforward by a commission, responsible to the president, on a strictly commercial basis, it will be a great victory for public opinion and public rights.

UP GO PRICES OF COAL
As usual, the public is called on to pay the expenses of the standing differences between the mine operators and workers. And who can say that the public has not a direct, vital interest in controversies over necessities which it must buy?
There must be some other way to settle the coal strike besides waiting out the issue. Furthermore, waiting out the issue may prolong the idleness in the mining district into the busy season of autumn.
Both the operators and workers have rights, which the government and the public must respect. However, the rights of the public are paramount.

Daily Editorial Digest

(Title Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)
Resume of American and Foreign Newspaper Opinion
WAGE CUT OF RAILWAY WORKERS
While the men are voting on acceptance of the wage cut ordered by the Railroad Board, and the Brotherhood leaders are considering future moves, the public is expressing its attitude through the press. And the motion to adopt seems carried overwhelmingly. But there is in newspaper opinion, as there was in the board itself, a minority that protests against a reduction in wages of a class of railroad workers who are poorly paid at best.
To this position, however, the NEW YORK EVENING WORLD replies that the reduction of pay of maintenance of way men "must be considered as only a part of a larger adjustment of railroad wages to take effect July 1," and from this point of view it is welcomed generally by the press as part, as the ST. LOUIS GLOBE DEMOCRAT puts it, "of the painful process of getting back to normal standards."
The Railroad Labor Board "has acted under an imperative economic pressure and necessity," says the PLANT (Mich.) JOURNAL and, the NEWARK NEWS adds, it "has no intent of dealing unfairly with the workers. Having stepped railroad wages up, it now thinks it time to step them down again." Coming just at this time the action of the Board is, in the opinion of the HARTFORD TIMES, "a desirable, even a necessary concomitant of the recently announced reduction in freight rates."
But it is in its relation to the reduction in rates that many editors protest against the wage cut. The PITTSBURGH PRESS "cannot help doubting the wisdom of the new wage cuts before the effect of freight and passenger rate reductions has been tried," for "there is good reason to believe that the rate reductions would so increase the earnings of the roads per unit by means of the wage cut unnecessary." And if, as is freely predicted, the present order by other decisions which will make reductions in wages of about 500,000 skilled shop workers, and about 200,000 clerks, telegraphers, station employees and other small classes, the OMAHA WORLD HERALD concludes that "labor will not stand the full cost of the freight reductions, but will contribute an additional $100,000,000 for good and overflowing measure to make sure that what ever else may be reduced, railroad dividends will not be."
Indeed, "the rule referred to in the Scripture of depriving him who has little of even his poor possessions," seems to the NEW YORK TRIBUNE to have been the logic in determining the revised wage rates. "At no time in the history of transportation," says the GLOBE, have the wages of maintenance of way laborers "sufficed to maintain families at any decent standard of living," and "the new rates cannot be the old tradition of insufficiency." The RALEIGH (N.C.) TIMES, at any rate, cannot recall "having met anybody who got rich working as a section hand." Since, as the NEW YORK CALL contends, "wages received before this reduction were insufficient to enable the men and their families to live in decency and comfort," monotonously, the WATERBURY (Conn.) TIMES says, "the new weekly income of $11.04 'is too small an income upon which to maintain a very high standard of living.' It would require 'frugal living' for an individual, the DECATUR (Ga.) HERALD observes, while "for the support of a family it is impossible," but the blow of wage readjustment has been "allowed to fall upon the particular class of workers already in the poorest straits." The HERALD continues, because unskilled workers such as railroad laborers "have the least power of resistance; they are unable to accumulate savings to tide them over, and their places are easily filled, and while admitted 'it is easier to kick the under dog,' that does 'not justify that policy' being pursued by a governmental agency."
Nevertheless, "what has been done," the MANCHESTER UNION states, "is to fix the wages of maintenance of way men at about the level of pay for similar work in other branches of industry," and, the BALTIMORE NEWS adds, "unless we are to believe that all mechanics in similar lines of work outside the railroad business have been subjected to long periods of semi-starvation, the figures presented to us by the minority board are 'simply meaningless,' and are, in fact, the RICHMOND TIMES DISPATCH suggests, "based rather on the scale of wages born of the exigencies of war than on the sound economic position now." In view of all the factors entering into the decision the CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER finds it is "surprising not that a wage reduction was ordered, but that the reduction was not heavier."
The most important and immediate effect of the wage cut, in the opinion of many writers, is that, as the NORFOLK LEDGER DISPATCH puts it, "it will probably give work to a larger number of men." The BOSTON TRANSCRIPT explains that "the railroad rates have been deferring much construction and maintenance work because at the costs which have been prevailing they did not feel justified in undertaking it." Now with these costs reduced the ALBANY (N.Y.) TIMES thinks it "very likely that the roads will try to catch up with their repair programs by employing more men," and should this prove true the INDIANAPOLIS NEWS believes that "the general benefits accruing both to the men themselves and this country should much more than offset the decrease made in their pay."
Another point that interests editors in the practically simultaneous reduction in both freight and wage rates is the apparent recognition of the fact, declared by the BROOKLYN EAGLE, that "the operation of the Interstate Commerce Commission against railroad rates must be balanced by the operation of the United States Railroad Labor Board in readjusting wages to meet the changing conditions." As the NORFOLK VIRGINIAN PILOT expresses it, "The Nip and Tuck Twins, after a protracted period of independent action, are at last in step.... The close timing of the new rate and wage cuts seems to indicate that some form of entente has been established" between the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Railroad Labor Board, and the Norfolk paper voices the opinion of the press generally that "a better correlation between the two agencies is to be welcomed."

GERMAN "REPARATIONS"
Paris.—German statistics recently showed that 100,000 new dwellings had been completed in Germany within recent months. "Reconstruction" is apparently going forward in the Reich without much difficulty.
The news must have provoked strange emotions among the thousands of French people, who have not slept under a watertight roof in many years, wonder why, in the "peace of justice" that has followed the armistice, the Germans did not build those 100,000 houses in France.
Perhaps some of them remember that the Germans have offered time and again to do this very thing, and that various French ministers have been favorable to the idea—Louchere, for one. But every time the proposal has come up, there have always been super-patriots in French political life sufficient to block the scheme on the ground that "the people of the devastated regions would rather sleep in the open air than in a German-built house."
Of course the wise ones are not fooled. "Reparations" is a word of double meaning. To the great majority of Frenchmen—including those who belong to the devastated region—it means rebuilding what has been destroyed. They don't care much who rebuilds it, so long as the job is done and done quickly. But to a few it means fat contracts, and unfortunately the few are often able to make their will prevail against the many.
To some extent the men who seek profits by selling shells where-when in destroy, are the same ones who now seek profits from the replacement of what was destroyed. They get it going and coming.
The old Paris Morgue—which once was a favorite spot for tourists, rivaling the Louvre and the Eiffel Tower—is about to disappear at last. The "Medico Legal Institute," which is to replace it is practically completed.
For many years the Morgue has not been open to sightseers. They used to flock there in thousands to view the corpses of unidentified suicides that had been found up in the Seine. But finally the city authorities got tired of having this gruesome institution known the world over as one of the show-places of Paris.
The old Morgue has seen many mysteries, and it is fitting that as its career draws to a close it should have what is perhaps the greatest mystery of its history.
The question is simply whether former deputy Paul Meunier, whose body was autopsied there the other day, is really dead.
Paul Meunier was released from prison only a few weeks ago, having been arrested about the time of the armistice charged with transacting with the enemy. Two years of investigations have failed to reveal any proofs against him beyond the fact (which was scarcely a secret) that he was a socialist, so the judge let him go.
Then came the news that he was suffering from appendicitis, and a few days later the announcement that he had died after an operation performed by eminent specialists.
The body was sent to the Morgue for autopsy. The official medical examiner of the city of Paris declares that he opened the coffin, photographed the body from several angles removed the organs for examination, and issued a burial certificate in due form.
But people who claim to have seen the pictures say the body was not that of Paul Meunier. One person who claims to have been there says the coffin was not even opened.
It is known that the police have recently come into possession of new evidence concerning the Meunier case, and there have been rumors that he was to be re-arrested. A good many people are persuaded that the "death" was arranged to throw the police off the track.
Dr. Paul declares: "I am not sure of the existence of God, but I am sure of one thing: That I performed the autopsy of Paul Meunier."
Further more he declares that the surgeon who operated on Meunier, and who has known him for many years, was present at the autopsy.
The surgeon, however, refused to make any statement, inasmuch as he is bound by law to maintain professional secrecy.
There is a demand for the exhumation of the body, but the authorities assert there is no shadow of a reason for such a course, since the burial certificate was issued in due form and leaves no room for doubt.
Unless the exhumation takes place, however, half Paris will believe that Paul Meunier is still alive.

How To Rest!
By Dr. R. H. Bishop
There is a science in resting. One great cause of nervous prostration is ignorance of this science.
A person may lie down, willing himself to rest, and, by the mere effort of willing cause the nerve strain that will undo the benefits of lying down. We very correctly lay the blame for many nervous maladies of today to high tension and strain. People rush through work, and meals and even sleep. Only those who have learned something of the real art of relaxing, can stand such strain day in and day out, and continue in good health.
Hard work never will hurt the man or woman who can forget business and worries when business hours are over. Relaxation and recreation often are the same thing. Strenuous exercise may be a form of rest if it calls into play other organs and muscles.
There is little advantage in trying to rest your tired body and at the same time rest your tired mind and nerves. "Nerves" never can be treated effectively while the body is fatigued. Learning to rest therefore, is elementary.
One great metropolitan neurological clinic has an effective procedure in teaching nervous patients how to rest.
The patient lies down comfortably, and, closing his eyes, gives his thoughts to relaxing the arm and leg muscles. To test the relaxation, the doctor raises an arm by the wrist, or a leg by the ankle, and suddenly let it go; the completely relaxed limb will instantly fall limp; the least enervation is shown by a hesitation in the fall of the limb or by a slightly continued rise after cessation of the motive power as applied by the physician.
This procedure has been found beneficial in several nervous manifestations.

Could Be Irish Colonel
Chicago.—It isn't surprising that Patrick Collins looks for the latest from Ireland every time he opens a newspaper. His name accounts for that.
But this particular Patrick has a special cause, aside from being an Irishman, for being interested in current events on the Old Sod.
In the first place, he has a brother there—no less a personage than Michael Collins, head of the Free State army. And he could be a colonel in this army if he chose, instead of a mere sergeant, attached to the South Chicago police station and on the list of eligibles for promotion to a lieutenant.
Sergeant Collins doesn't choose, however. "My heart surely bleeds for the old country," he says, "but my love's with America. It's a citizen of the United States I am, first and last and all the time."
Of his brother he says:
"Mike and I were kids together at Clonkilly, a bit of a place just outside the good city of Cork. Mike was studious, not wild like me. I came to America when I was 17. Mike was to have come 10 years ago, too. I had a fine job in a bank waiting for him. He was on the brink of sailing when something happened that made him change his mind. He wrote to me later that Ireland needed him. In truth I guess it did. I'm proud of Mike. I appreciate his offer to make me a colonel, but my duty is to the Free State."

But this particular Patrick has a special cause, aside from being an Irishman, for being interested in current events on the Old Sod.
In the first place, he has a brother there—no less a personage than Michael Collins, head of the Free State army. And he could be a colonel in this army if he chose, instead of a mere sergeant, attached to the South Chicago police station and on the list of eligibles for promotion to a lieutenant.
Sergeant Collins doesn't choose, however. "My heart surely bleeds for the old country," he says, "but my love's with America. It's a citizen of the United States I am, first and last and all the time."
Of his brother he says:
"Mike and I were kids together at Clonkilly, a bit of a place just outside the good city of Cork. Mike was studious, not wild like me. I came to America when I was 17. Mike was to have come 10 years ago, too. I had a fine job in a bank waiting for him. He was on the brink of sailing when something happened that made him change his mind. He wrote to me later that Ireland needed him. In truth I guess it did. I'm proud of Mike. I appreciate his offer to make me a colonel, but my duty is to the Free State."

Could Be Irish Colonel
Chicago.—It isn't surprising that Patrick Collins looks for the latest from Ireland every time he opens a newspaper. His name accounts for that.

Q. How is the figure of Christ suspended on the cross in the Oberammergau Passion Play?
A. Anton Lanz, who has the part of Christ, wears a stout belt under his loin cloth. A hook is fixed in the cross, and the belt passes over it. Mr. Lanz also curves his fingers over the rails in the cross piece. As he hangs suspended for 20 minutes, the physical strain is very severe. A bag of wine secreted in the loin cloth and punctured by the soldier, provides the red strain when the Christ is pierced by the spear.

A. There are 72 games scheduled for each team.
Q. Which is more important to the diet, mineral salts or vitamins? C. H. R.
A. Vitamins are necessary in bringing about the proper metabolism and to help disseminate the mineral salts. Many authorities insist that lack of vitamins is more dangerous to health than a lack of mineral salts.
Q. Are more chickens raised and more eggs laid than there were 10 years ago?

BUSHEY STUDENTS ARE "EXPERIENCED"

Students Graduating From Bushey College Have Had Practical Work

There are all of ten calls for experienced stenographers and bookkeepers to one for inexperienced. John Bushey, Principal of the Bushey College, has practically solved this problem.

He is offering the free services of advanced students in stenography and bookkeeping until their work is worth more than it has cost the employer in time and patience.

The result has been very gratifying. Nearly every day some one calls for extra office help, so that the students of this school are getting practical experience while finishing their courses. They work but a very short time before receiving pay for their services, for business men soon find that they are worth more than the experience they are getting.

These temporary jobs often develop into permanent positions for the students.

Ackerman Recalls College Tragedy Of 51 Years Ago

It was 51 years ago Saturday, June 10, that Thomas Kniseley and Miss Clara McCloud, members of the graduating class of 1871 from Lawrence college were drowned in Little Lake Butte des Morts after the senior class outing at Stroeb's Island. The incident has been recalled by William D. Ackerman, who was a student at Lawrence during the seventies and who with Seldon J. Lewis found the body of Mr. Kniseley.

According to Mr. Ackerman's story, the Faville brothers and their girl friends, and Miss McCloud, "Cloudy" as she was familiarly known, and Mr. Kniseley spent the day together at the picnic. When the party broke up, Miss McCloud and Mr. Kniseley decided they wanted to row to the long railroad bridge and left the party. When they did not return to their boarding houses by 12 o'clock friends became alarmed and a search was made for them. The search continued until Wednesday night.

The overturned boat with Mr. Kniseley's coat inside was found on Sunday and the searching party established its headquarters in a barn on the shore and students and faculty spent their time looking for the bodies. Miss McCloud's body was found on Wednesday morning floating among the reeds on the east shore of the river and in the evening, Mr. Kniseley's body was found.

When the class held its commencement exercises, two chairs draped in black were left for the absent members. The bodies had been sent to their respective homes for burial.

PREPARE NOW IS HALL'S MESSAGE TO GRADUATES

Twenty-five Graduate from Kaukauna High School
Friday Evening

Kaukauna—"If you are not preparing yourself for the future now, if you are not doing the best you know how with a view of eventually taking your place among men, it's a 20 to 1 wager that you never will prepare," said Arnold R. Hall, professor at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, in his commencement address before 25 graduates of Kaukauna high school and their parents and friends Friday evening in the city auditorium. Mr. Hall urged the young people never to feel they are too busy to begin preparing for life for in continually postponing one's plans one already begins to lay a foundation which is detrimental to one's greatest good.

An instructive talk on "Vocational Education" was given by Miss Helena Corp, valedictorian and a creditable oration and salutatory on "The Master's Ideal" was given by Mark Griffith. These two students also represented their class of eighth grade graduates from Nicolet graded school as valedictorian and salutatory.

Abraham Lincoln was the martyr to whom Mr. Griffith referred and in the course of his address he unveiled a bust statue of the great president and presented it to the high school on behalf of the class of 1922. The first annual presentation of the Lang Trophy, offered by A. M. Lang, jeweler, was made during the program by John T. Hale, member of the graduating class, who was chosen by a committee from the high school faculty as the best all round student during the last year. School activities, athletics and attitude as well as scholarship are factors which determine the winner of the cup.

Special music was furnished by the girls glee club, the girls and boys clubs, the orchestra and a quartet consisting of Elmer Grimmer, Harold Debus, Evelyn Jahries and Olive Jacobson.

Mr. Hall, speaker of the evening, said there is two kinds of preparedness. The first is material preparedness, or the preparedness to make one's living, to do one's share of the world's work and to take one's place among men. He outlined the forming of habits, industry, perseverance and mastery as four steps in material preparedness.

The speaker cautioned against the common thought of young people that they are only young once and must have a good time while the opportunity exists. He explained that each daily task must be prepared well, whether in the school, the factory or the home.

"The second essential to preparedness for life is the habit of using your head," continued the speaker. "When we are assigned to a task we must ask ourselves how that task can be done quickly, thoroughly. Other elements are the habit of coming to your daily tasks physically fit and the habit of developing personality." Mr. Hall gave illustrations to show that each characteristic in itself is not enough for successful life but that all qualities which he mentioned are great factors in preparedness for life.

KAUKAUNA HOPES TO STOP BAYMEN'S STRING OF WINS

Brautigan Says His Team is Ready for Stiffest Fight of Year

Kaukauna—The rain Thursday afternoon sent Brautigan's coits of the Kaukauna River valley league scampering for shelter shortly after they had started their regular afternoon practice session. They have not been able to get in much time on the grounds since then. However, the players feel that they will be in good shape for the game Sunday with Green Bay.

Practice or no practice, Brautigan figures his men are about set to take the first scalp from the league leading Bays. According to a report of the league secretary published this week, Kaukauna leads the entire league in slugging.

The Lynchmen are coming to Kaukauna with 500 or more fans and seating capacity of the grand stand and bleachers will no doubt be taxed to the limit. Officials are preparing for the largest crowd of the season.

Otto A. Look, proprietor of the Kaukauna Drug Co., has offered a fine grade glove to the Kaukauna player who first knocks a homer in Sunday's game. Interest in the game is running high. The confidence of the local fans still is unshaken and they will turn out as before to witness the race.

APPEALS TO COURT FOR HIS FREEDOM

Madison, Wis. — Appeal to the Wisconsin Supreme court for freedom, on the basis of errors in his trial, was made Friday by Frank Lang, serving 20 years in the state prison after conviction for the murder August 14, 1920 of Charles Pacini, wealthy Kenosha shoe owner.

Attorneys for the prisoner contended that the confession of Lang to the crime was forced from him by fourth degree methods of Kenosha police, to escape further punishment at their hands. They assert that the confession, later repudiated but admitted as evidence by the court, was involuntary.

Police claim that the man when arrested confessed to numerous burglaries and to the murder of Pacini, and denying that they beat him into the confession.

The crime took place two years ago and the Kenosha man was returning home. He was held up by a robber and when he resisted was killed.

SHIPPERS WAITING FOR CUT IN FREIGHT RATES

Very little freight is being handled in Appleton at present and the reason therefor is said to be the reduction in freight rates which goes into effect July 1. Shippers are confining their orders to what they need before that time and the consequent decrease in the amount of incoming and outgoing freight is very noticeable at local freight depots. Draymen claim if it were not for people moving they would have very little to do. The average cut in freight rates according to a local station agent, will amount to 10 per cent.

INTERLAKES AND HORTONVILLE PLAY HERE SUNDAY

COUNTY LEAGUE TEAMS MEET ON LOCAL DIAMOND

Both Squads Bolstered Up for Stiff Fight — Other League Games

Hortonville at Appleton. Kimberly at Black Creek. Freedom at Dale.

County league baseball teams are set for tomorrow's championship games. All six teams have reported considerable bolstering and strengthening of squads in anticipation of hard games. Every team in the league has a chance of capturing the flag in the first half of the season.

Appleton fans are interested most in the struggle between Hortonville and the Interlakes squad on Interlake diamond. This game is to begin at 2:30. Hortonville has defeated the Interlakes once this season and has lost only one game. The Interlakes, on the other hand, have won but one game. The squad, however, looks a good deal better now than it did at the start of the season.

Kimberly, thus far, has an inside track to the pennant with a perfect average. The Milltown has a squad of which it may well be proud. Pocan looks like the class of the league as a pitcher. Black Creek it is reported here is primed for the invaders and it would not be surprising if the Mill men run into pretty stiff opposition in the northern village.

Freedom and Dale met in the third game of the afternoon. This game is to be played at Dale.

County towns never were as interested in baseball as they are this year. Attendance has far exceeded expectations and seems to be growing with every game. The teams are evenly matched and are putting up fine exhibitions of baseball.

AMATEUR TEAMS TO USE BRANDT PARK

B. and J. and St. Aloysius Society Teams Will Play Sunday Afternoon

Behnke and Jones and St. Aloysius Young Men's society baseball teams will play in Brandt park Sunday afternoon. The game is to start at 2:30. Both teams are playing good ball. The B. and J. squad has won five out of the last six games and the Young Men's team won the last two.

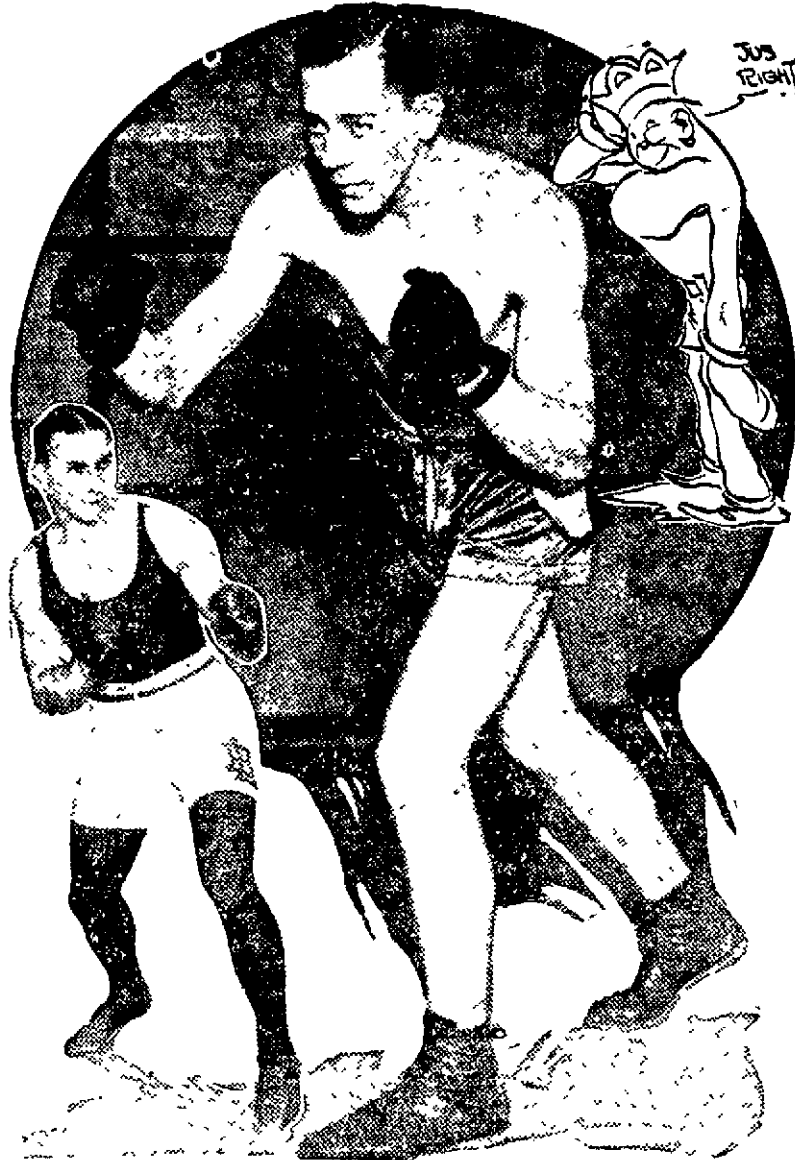

The Behnke and Jones battery will be Klundt, Wilson and Geyer, and the Young Men's will start Zuehlke in the box and Schwartz behind the bat. A challenge to any amateur team in the state has been issued by the B. and J. squad. Games can be arranged by getting in touch with William Drexler, who lives at 1309 Eighth st. His telephone number is 2039.

A Family Affair?

BY BOB DORMAN

Most fighters, when they get to be champions, think of nothing but how to hold their titles—not to whom they can leave them.

But Benny Leonard, premier light weight believes in keeping the championship in his own family. A championship is an asset to a family, he says. He admits he can't title holder forever, but he wants his successor to be named Leonard too.

So he has been training his brother, Joey, up in the way he should go. 'Joe's never yet faced an opponent in the ring,' he said. 'But Billy Gib-

IF THIS PLAY COMES UP

Here's Your Decision

If a base runner passes a preceding runner on the lines, he is automatically out the moment he does so. It may seem, that such a thing should rarely happen in baseball yet in the major leagues every year a number of players are called out for such a violation. The play invariably comes up on a fly ball, which the base runner who is on first believes will be caught, and he plays it safe by going half way to second and awaiting developments. The batsman, not believing the ball will be caught, runs out the hit at full speed, passing the preceding runner between first and second. The ball is dropped, and the runner originally on first reaches second on the muff while the batsman who made the hit probably pulls up at third. The batsman, however, is automatically out for having passed the preceding runner and must be removed from the bases.

HOW TO PLAY BASEBALL

Catcher an Outguess Enemy

By BILLY EVANS

The catcher is the most important cog in the baseball machine. It has been baseball history that few clubs have ever won a pennant that lacked at least one high-class back stop.

Size is no bar to catching, although the impression in baseball at one time was that a catcher to make good in the majors must be a big husky fellow.

I remember when Ray Schalk joined the Chicago club, that a lot of people were dubious as to his chances. Some of the experts figured so small a chap would never be able to handle the delivery of Ed Walsh, noted for his puzzling snitball.

It is needless to comment on Schalk's ability as a catcher. He is one of the greatest performers of all time.

A good arm is a desirable asset for a catcher, yet I have known a number of great catchers who had only fair arms. Lack of speed they made up in accuracy and the ability to get the ball away quickly.

STUDY THE BATTERS

The catcher must do much of the thinking for his team. A great many pitchers depend almost entirely on the judgement of their catchers.

For that reason a catcher must study his batters, learn their weaknesses and strong points. Knowing these he must constantly work on them.

Figuring out the opposition is largely up to the catcher. He must try to dope out when an opposing player is about to steal, when he believes the hit and run is going to be pulled or when the squeeze play is on. Having made up his mind, he must play his hunch and call for a waste ball.

The wise catcher shifts his field, or sees that his field is shifted, before he permits the pitcher to deliver the ball. Proper playing for a batsman under certain conditions is most necessary. Modern ball teams specialize in shifting the defense to meet the batter and the style of the pitcher's delivery.

It was perhaps an hour, or even more that Vario buried himself in the cabin, going over everything from aerial to headgear, testing vacuum tubes, getting a fine adjustment on the variable condenser. The air fairly reeked with talk of tuning coils, transformers, variocouplers and variometers, rheostats and regenerative sets, the merits and demerits of nearly every controversial piece of apparatus known to radio. It was to be expected that Garrick with a practical man like Vario, meeting with Dick, of the inventive mind, in fact he was pleased. The second hour was lengthening when Vario had the apparatus working properly. Curtis, who had spent most of the time in the little pilot house going over some charts with the navigator, joined them.

"Suppose you're going back to your cottage, Professor, not to Rock Lodge yet?" he asked, then turned, unbending a bit, to Garrick and Dick. "Like to take a little run over to Shelter Island with us and back while we take the Professor home?"

The shipbuilder excused himself and dropped down into his skiff and the "Bauchante" was cutting across soon at a great clip, as if proud to show her paces.

At Manhasset Curtis decided to land with Professor Vario, to be picked up later, and the scout boat swung about to land, Garrick and Dick back to Greenport.

It did not take Garrick long to find an excuse for one of his hasty surveys of the cabin. As usual, as if by instinct, he put his finger on the spot. It was a slip of paper tucked in what passed for a log book. He passed it to Dick:

"5-22-22-250 cases S. S. ARROYO, CKGG."

Dick looked up and whispered quickly. "Smuggling from Latin-Americans?"

Garrick did not even answer. His forefinger was traveling down a list of calls pasted in the front of the book.

"CKGG The Inner Circle. **W. 49th St."

"yah!" growled a thick Norwegian voice as the navigator peered his head in. "Snooping—eh? I show!" He blew sharply on a whistle from his pocket.

Instantly it seemed as if the crew swarmed from every direction. It was a glorious, if ignoble sight. In about the time that it might have taken to tell it Garrick and Dick found themselves flung overboard in the open of Greenport Harbor with the tide running strong out of Peconic Bay into Gardner's Bay.

Only a couple of athletes would ever have found themselves again on shore wet and dripping, stripping off what was left of their clothes and hanging them on the ribs of an old wreck to dry in the blazing sun after the tough battle in the water.

from Garrick and Dick to some of his multitudinous business in pleasing the ultra particular. They strained their ears.

"I was just up there!" Then a break. "And it came in over Pinkie's wireless from . . . It was lost. 'It said, Watch out for Garrick and Dick. They got ashore . . . To New York . . . Get them out of the way for good.'"

Garrick and Dick exchanged glances. "Forewarned, forearmed," whispered Dick.

"Our forearm are about all we've got, too!"

There was a swish of someone passing their door and along the hall. Dick started. It was Ruth herself! Both he and Garrick were on their feet in a moment, quietly, down the hall after her and around a heavy carved post up the stairs to the second floor.

She turned as she heard their steps in the wide hall on the second floor. "And along came Ruth!" exclaimed Garrick, smiling.

"What are you boys doing here? Snooping again? It's a bad idea. Snappers never come to any good end!" She laughed, but neither could be so obtuse as not to see that there was a kick in it.

She had her hand on the knob of a door at the end of the hall. She turned it, looked in, shut the door again and faced them.

"What us around, Ruth. I'm crazy about this shack."

"Well, Guy, you might think I was a megaphone man in a Chinatown for-a-dollar rubberneck bus . . . or the guide in many museums. Just what do you want to see this time?"

Her lightning mind seemed to tune itself to a fine adjustment. She did not wait for a reply. Instead, she opened the door and admitted them into a very pink room.

"Wait here a minute. Does any body know you are here?"

"No one," but Georges.

JILTS WEALTHY AMERICAN TO WED COUNT SHE LOVES

American Girl is Happy With Poverty-Stricken Hungarian Nobleman

BY ALEXANDER HERMAN

New York.—"We're the wealthiest persons in the world—for we have each other."

This the defy of the Count and Countess Zichy to deputy sheriffs who are trying to collect from the count a judgment for several hundred dollars returned against him as the result of an automobile accident.

Paying such a judgment would have been soft for George Burton, son of the late millionaire brewer, whom the countess jilted on her wedding day to marry the count. But between a rich man whom she merely liked well, and a count harassed by a judgement for a few hundred dollars, whom she loved with all her heart, the countess

"Well, only love matters," says she.

Anyhow, the count could clean up the judgment in thirty seconds if he had what's coming to him from his family's Hungarian estate. So there!

THEIR ROMANCE

The countess was Charlotte Gardiner Demarest, who divided her time between the younger sets of New York, London and Paris.

"All my life I dreamed about a real romance, with a husband as handsome and chivalrous as knights of old," she said today. "But knight-hood seems to have gone to seed."

"I met the count after he came to America in 1920. He had been imprisoned for several years in Russian war camps. I wasn't much thrilled—at first. But he danced divinely and played tennis like a champion, and I was just beginning to think a bit of him when I had to sail abroad."

The count takes up the story.

"I am of the Hungarian nobility, but was reared in England. I was captured by the Russians during the war. After coming to America I turned scenario and short story writer, insurance agent and automobile salesman."

By day he sold autos under the name of Edward Wright; but after 6 p. m. he was Count Zichy.

It was after Miss Demarest's return from abroad that he read of her coming in the paper. He decided to call on her.

"The moment he entered the room," said the countess with excitement. "I knew I could never be happy as the wife of another. And he couldn't bear the thought of my becoming another man's bride. So—we got married."

Then the man who held the old judgment read of the romance, and started proceedings to collect.

Did the count come across? Not immediately.

"What do we care," says the countess, "if some horrid sheriff is trying to collect some money from an old auto accident? What's money, when you're in love?"

LEARN A WORD EVERY DAY

Today's word is CHAGRIN. It is pronounced—sha-grin, or especially by the English, sha-green. with accent in either case on the second syllable.

It means—that which worries, vexes or mortifies; melancholy. Its origin is uncertain. It's used like this—"Old-line politicians are showing considerable chagrin over the defeat of New by Rev. Bridger in Indiana, and of the Republican machine by Pinchot in Pennsylvania."

WHITE LACE COATS

Coats of white lace are new and very smart. They are worn over all-white costumes and are guileless of belting or ornamentation.

Final Examinations Are the Crisis Of School Life

Boys and girls must be in the best shape to meet them. Every parent should understand the physical defects which, without actually making the child ill, may nevertheless handicap him in the approaching examinations. "The School Child's Health" prepared by the American School Hygiene Association gives an authoritative explanation of this problem of child efficiency. ## Why Flappers Fail

They are Fooling Themselves

AGNES DOHONEY

(Selected as Convention Girl by the Disabled American Veterans of the World War in a contest from which all flapper types were barred and only "home types" admitted.)

They fool themselves! And persons who fool themselves are bound to fail.

That is the outstanding reason for the failure of flappers.

To really succeed, sincerity is necessary. And sincerity covers a long list of relationships: sincerity toward life, toward work, toward home, toward love, toward purpose and all the worthwhile things.

If we interpret the flapper in the generally accepted sense, can we credit her with sincerity? Can one fool ones self and be sincere? Scarcely!

Vener will hide anything for a time, whether it be a staircase or a woman. But it is not long before constant wear shows the rough boards from which the staircase is built; and, just so, when the shell wears thin human shamming is revealed.

An outstanding accusation against the flapper has been that she is the follower of the most recent fad. If this be true she also must be charged with inability to weigh values, lack of originality, lack of individuality and with general superficiality.

If affectation and superficiality are to dominate, how can anything except ultimate failure be expected?

OUR FIRST YEAR

Chapter 57—Storm Clouds Gathering

By a Bride

When "Skoot" finally was produced the audience were enthusiastic, the play was profitable and I was a success; but the part was wearing and when the week of performances was concluded, I collapsed.

All that week, my dear boy was perfectly devoted to me. He never showed a symptom of jealousy, never minded the cluttered kitchen nor the delicate messes.

But there's one detail I never neglected. Tired as I was, after a night at the Little Playhouse, I always got up in the morning conscientiously and prepared a dainty breakfast for my husband.

I think a wife who doesn't get breakfast for the man who pays the bills is not fulfilling her share of the domestic contract. How can a girl expect a husband to work well in any occupation if he is obliged to start the day with a breakfast cooked by himself?

Of course after Jack had gone to the office, I went back to bed. Without my proper allowance of sleep, I would have looked haggard as the viking's bride.

Naturally, my sleep interfered with my housekeeping and about every evening Jack would come home finding the dishes piled high in the kitchen sink.

Toward the end of the week, Jack looked thin and worn. If he had been jealous of Bart, I could have explained his looks.

"Sick, Jack dear?" I asked. "Beastly tired—that's all!" "Business bad, darling?" "Rotten!"

I remembered what Jessie Langdon had said about her husband's success. Sometimes I wondered if Jack were in the right kind of work. He was getting bluer every payday because he was receiving only his salary—no commissions.

"Selling is the modern idea of a man's success," he said to me. "But my people never have made good in trade. Why, I couldn't sell bread to a starving man. I'd think something was the matter with it. Or he'd expect me to give it to him!"

"Now that's only your point of view, Jack! Surely you can sell insurance or anything else as well as anybody. It's the times—"

"The times—I know. It's easy to see why business is slow. But a fellow can't help getting depressed, wife! Oh, yes! I ought to be glad. I am glad I've got any kind of a job. But Peggins, I wonder—what you'd think of me if I came home—"

"I silenced him with a caress. But my blood chilled at the idea. These hills—unpaid—what a disgrace—how Jack would feel—if he couldn't pay them!"

MARRIAGE A LA MODE

Lithuanians keep the divorce evil down by an efficiency system.

No girl is looked upon as marriageable until 24.

By that time she must have made with her own hands a quantity of clothes which she distributes among the guests at the wedding.

She must also have served a domestic apprenticeship under her mother.

Cellars Flooded

The heavy downpour of rain Thursday and Friday afternoons temporarily flooded many cellars in the city.

The trouble was caused by backwater from sewers, some of which were overtaxed. The water soon subsided, however, and very little damage was reported.

Household Hints

WHITE AND RED FROCKS

At New York's most fashionable hotel recently a dinner dance revealed that nearly every woman present was dressed in all-white frocks or bright red. It is easy to figure which was the choice of the blond and which of the brunet.

MALINE TURBANS

For evening, women are wearing very smart little turbans effects of maline. They keep the hair in perfect shape, but do not have weight enough to disarrange it in any way. The transparent effect is charming.

COSTUME FOR BRUNET

A brunet, lunching at the Ritz recently looked very attractive in a three-piece costume of pale gray satin and a close gray turban. About her neck she wore a large strand of cloudy amber beads. She wore a wide carved bracelet of the same material.

PLAIN RUGS

Plain colored rugs are very good taste. For bedrooms they may be of blue or green. For living rooms gray or tan are the best choice. The dark colored ones are very attractive, but show every footstep. Black rugs are liked by some decorators.

IVORY PENDANTS

Pendants of carved white ivory are very popular now, especially when worn on the end of a narrow black ribbon. Beads of carved ivory and bar pins carved in floral designs are also very stylish.

TAFFETA BLOUSE

A white taffeta blouse, joined to a much draped and puffed black taffeta skirt, makes a Frenchy little outfit that delights the brunet who wears her hair very plain and dangles long pendants from her ears.

PERFUME BURNERS

Perfume burners are fascinating in design. They look like small vases, fitted with an electric light, but they provide a novel decoration for a room, as well as a novel method of burning incense.

Electric Flowers

When the large horseshoe had popped talking Nick picked up the red leather again and put it in his pocket. "Well, I guess we've lost enough time and we'd better be on our way, Nancy," he said.

"Goodbye," called the horseshoe. "If Twelve Toes puts any more electricity into me remember not to touch me on your way back. What's the big black thing you are carrying?"

"It's a photograph record with a message from Longhead, the Wise Man," answered Nancy.

"Well, it's made of hard rubber, so electricity can't hurt it," said the horseshoe, "but take my advice and don't touch anything more on the Electric Mountain. Not even the flowers and ferns you see growing on the slope. They are not real, they are made up of all sorts of colored metals and full of electric shocks. They are put there to tempt you. If you touch them you'll be shocked so that you'll lose your memory, the same as when you touched the Cloth of Dreams."

"Thank you for your advice. We'll be extra careful," said Nick. "Come on, Nancy."

The walking now, although it was down hill—or down mountain—was good. No more cross-criss wires, no more sparks, no more ugliness. Everywhere there was lovely dewy green grass with mountain flowers of all kinds and colors scattered round. Yellow, red, purple, blue, pink and white, and smelling like their own dear old orchard at home in Maytime.

"I should love to take the princess a bouquet," sighed Nancy, looking at the blossoms longingly.

"No, no, come on!" insisted Nick. "They're all dangerous. 'Humph, what's that?' Reaching his hand in his pocket he pulled out the red feather. 'Oh,' he laughed, 'I'd forgotten I had you, Mr. Feather, until you pricked me. Do you wish to write another message?'"

The red feather wrote on the magic paper, "Keep your eyes closed the rest of the way down the mountain. I shall guide you."

CONVENTION ENDS WITH VISIT THRU MILL AT KIMBERLY
Only a Few Delegates Remain for Trip Through Fox River Valley

Rain interfered with the plans of Appleton city officials and with the desires of a great number of delegates on the closing day of the twenty-fourth annual convention of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities in Appleton. The league finished its business Friday noon to allow the whole afternoon for the automobile trip to Fox river valley's scenic spots and industries. But no sooner had the delegates had their luncheon when the blackest of clouds gathered and poured cold water on their plans.

The automobile trip was then canceled and the majority of visitors took the first train home. But the clouds passed away and the reappearing sun tried to make amends. A hasty call was issued to automobile owners that the trip would be taken after all. Those delegates still in the city were driven along the shores of the Fox River to Kaukauna and back.

A stop was made at Kimberly to visit the large plant of the Kimberly-Clark paper mill. A little reception awaited the visitors here. Kimberly village band turned out to honor Wisconsin city and village officials, escorting them at the bridge and meeting them at the park where they further entertained them with a band concert. Will guides were on hand to take different groups through the plant. Here many of the delegates for the first time saw the interesting process of turning wood into paper. All of its stages from the sawing, barking, chipping, sifting, to the chemical treatment dissolving the fibres and the release of the finished product aroused exclamations of surprise and interest on the part of the visitors.

WEDDING PARTY NEARLY FIGURES IN TRAGEDY
The Tellock-Lueck wedding party of the town of Greenville, which included Miss Gladys Tellock, bride, Edwin Lueck, groom, narrowly escaped being struck by a switch engine Thursday afternoon while driving to Appleton to have their photographs taken.

It was raining heavily when they reached Appleton and in coming down Appleton-st. the driver failed to notice that guard gates were down at the Northwestern Railway crossing and smashed into them. A switch engine was approaching the crossing from the west and nearly collided with the automobile.

The gates on both sides of the railway tracks were damaged, but have since been repaired.

WIFE WANTS HUSBAND TO CONTRIBUTE TO SUPPORT
Charles Young, Milwaukee, formerly of Appleton, faces charges of non-support on complaint of his wife who lives here.

Undersheriff Earl Schwartz left Saturday morning for Milwaukee to bring the man into court. It is alleged that Young has been absent from his wife and two little children for six months and during that time contributed only $1 to his family's support.

NEW EDUCATIONAL LEADER NAMED BY OLIVE BRANCH
Miss Mable Krieger was elected educational leader of the Olive Branch society of Mount Olive Evangelical church at the regular meeting Friday evening to succeed Miss Leona Hegner, who is leaving the city soon.

Miss Hegner will be the society's delegate to the national Walther league convention to be held in Omaha, Neb., in July.

The society voted to cooperate with the Sunday school in conducting a basket picnic for the entire congregation on Sunday, June 25, probably at Alicia park.

Nothing portrays a man's character and tastes, and those of his family, so surely as the appearance of his home.

Price makes no difference. Good taste and discrimination can be expressed in any building from the cottage to the palace.

The need is for artistic ideas, coupled with practical knowledge of the builder's craft.

We can supply these to the man who cares for what a home should express.

A little study of this plan will show you why you will enjoy unusual comfort and convenience if you build this home. At the same time, you should derive the added pleasure and satisfaction from being the owner of a home so pleasing and individual in appearance.

This home was planned with two objects in view—economy of floor space and low construction cost. The simple, rectangular plan is economical and it gives each room an equal chance for air and light on two sides.

The outside chimney gives a homelike touch of the exterior. This plan calls for wide siding on frame construction, shingle roof, stucco base, brick chimney with cement cap, cement steps and front stoop with a side bench of wood. This house is designed to be erected on a 40-foot lot.

By grouping the windows in one corner of the living room an effect almost like a sun parlor is obtained. The sun room effect is an outstanding feature of the exterior design. Another pleasing detail is the hooded entrance with handsome glazed door.

The lower floor provides four good rooms and bath. The second floor offers a large bedroom and exceptionally large storage. In reality, this home is a semi-bungalow type. French doors between the living room and dining room permit the rooms to be thrown together, making practically one big room extending clear across the front of the house.

The kitchen has been planned to save steps and labor. Direct and easy access from the kitchen is provided to the dining room, also the living and bedroom on the first floor. The ice box has a door for outside icing. There is a handy broom closet and built-in ironing board in the kitchen. A linen closet is close to the bathroom. Plenty of closet space is provided.

This is a $5,000 home, including heating, plumbing, lighting, ready to live in.
